Arrival of Immigrants.

The extraordinary number of emigrants arriving this spring is attracting attention, and if it keeps up, the immigration this year will be much larger than ever before Since the first of January 2300 have arrived at Baltimore, as against 285 for the same period last year, and 35 825 have arrived at New York against 11,140 for 1879 During March last the number of arrivals was 21 653 against 5965 last year It is said that these immigrants are an unusually good class of people, most of them having sufficient money for a good start in life.

California School Lands.

Representative Berry will to-morrow introduce by request a bill relative to the acts of March 3d, 1853, and July 3d, 1866 granting school lands to the state of California He says that it is substantially the same measure that representative Page introduced some months ago, and that it provides for giving the state lieu lands for all sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections within her border which for any cause except by reason of mineral character, she has not yet obtained The bill does not waive the state's claim to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections found to be mineral, but leaves that controverted question untouched.

The Santillan Land Bill

WASHINGTON, April 12 —The house committee on private land claims to-day took final action on the Santillan bill in its amended form, and by a vote of 4 against 3 authorized Burrows to report it to the house, with a recommendation for passage The negative vote, which was larger than the California delegation expected, was cast by Pacheco Stevenson, of Illinois, and Martin of West Virginia, Burrows of Michigan Norcross of Massachusetts Voorhees of New Jersey and Gunter of Arkansas voted for the bill and it is understood that the four remaining members of the committee namely Mitchell of Pennsylvania, Caldwell of Kentucky Muldrow, of Mississippi and Myers of Indiana, would also have voted for it had they been present. The provisions of the bill finally adopted to-day are substantially the same that were fully described in last Monday's dispatches the only amendments being verbal changes which more strictly guard against disturbing the rights of San Francisco property holders and confine the effect of the measure to its avowed purpose of establishing a claim upon the government for an immense amount of indemnity in the form of land scrip to equal the value of the greater part of the area of San Francisco at the time when the Santillan grant was rejected Pacheco at the committee meeting to-day emphatically expressed his unqualified opinion that the Santillan grant was a fraud in its incipiency and that the so called newly discovered evidence is entirely manufactured and spurious He will prepare a minority report embodying these views The California delegation are all [illegible] dent that the bill will fail to become a law

Well Pleased with the Result of the English Election.

CHICAGO April 12 —Charles S Parnell telegraphs the Daily News from Cork as follows

I am exceedingly well pleased with the result of the elections Our party has gained nine seats from the whigs and tories, while a marked improvement has been effected in its personnel The timid and insincere have been replaced by determined and zealous workers We have carried Leinster, Munster and Connaught, except one county Suppose the liberals are rendered independent of the Irish members their majority disappears should we join the conservatives More over our party will scarcely cross to the ministerial side of the house even though that side shall be occupied by liberals instead of conservatives Our presence in the opposition will be understood as a constant reminder of the slender nature of the tenure by which ministers hold their power We expect a good land bill will be introduced and passed immediately We also anticipate an early passage of the local government measure as well as the household franchise bill The latter would enable us to carry every Irish seat in parliament with very few insignificant exceptions Should the liberals refuse to accede to our just demands they can be very promptly reduced to order by a determined stand on the part of our members The present Irish party is an immense advance in every respect upon previous representations and sufficient men have been returned of that class that know what they want and are determined to have it, to render it practically impossible that the most powerful ministry can withstand them As showing the resolution of the people to abolish landlordism the election of James O Kelly who defeated The O'Conor Don in Roscommon, after sitting there 20 years is considered the most remarkable demonstration of the election

Bismarck Writes a Letter

BERLIN, April 12—The Post publishes a reply from Bismarck to a letter from Herr Beneler, who forwarded a copy of his motion for a congress to promote a general disarmament Bismarck says "I am so occupied with practical urgent business of the present that I am unable to devote attention to a future which I fear that neither of us will ever see. Not until you succeed in winning over neighbors to your plans, could I in behalf of our ever defensive Fatherland, undertake the responsibility of such proposals but even I fear the mutual control of nations over the armament of their neighbors would be difficult and uncertain and that it would be far from easy to create a forum which could effectively exercise such control

German Army Reform.

BERLIN, April 10 —In the reichstag to day debate began on the second reading of the army bill Stauffenberg proposed to restrict the term of operation of the bill to three years Rejected by 120 to 104 The first and second paragraphs fixing the peace strength of the army until March 31 1888 at 427 270 men was adopted by 186 to 96 The minister of war declared that the bill owed its origin not only to the present political situation but to reasons of a lasting character and that a permanent military budget alone could give the army stability and confidence. Rickert, national liberal, said that the strengthening of the army was of the highest importance to the nation and must not be made a party question now He declared that there existed in Germany a party which wished to weaken the defensive power of the fatherland, but it was the desire of the whole nation to uphold with a mighty hand possessions which Germany had acquired and to maintain peace

ITEMS FROM WASCO

X Y Z writing from The Dalles under date of the 10th sends the following

The new steamboat building at The Dalles is rapidly approaching completion and will be launched as soon as the river rises There are also two large barges nearly done, which are for use in moving the coming grain crop

The weather this winter has been exceedingly dry up here—not more than half the usual amount of rainfall having taken place The ground is quite dry There was a splendid shower of rain Friday night which made everybody feel good To day a little rain has fallen and the clouds look decidedly like there was more moisture in them soon to fall

The Dalles looks much better than before the fire A better class of buildings has sprung up notable among them is the splendid new Umatilla house kept by Handley & Sinnott Though it is now very large and roomy it is crowded and they are building a large three story addition thereto The success of the proprietors shows what pluck and energy will do

One can have but little idea of the magnitude of railroad work by reading about it but when you see the vast amount of material going forward the large numbers of men moving backward and forward through The Dalles and learn that there are 1500 men on the pay rolls of the railroad company you can form some idea of the progress the work must be making I have not been on the road but I learn that the work is progressing finely

A good many persons in The Dalles of both parties are much in hope that Hon W Lair Hill will reconsider his decision not to become a candidate for supreme judge and will yet allow his name to go before the convention If he should become a candidate it is believed that the majority against him east of the mountains will be very small indeed If he does not receive a majority there In case his name is not allowed to go before the convention the delegation will present the name of H [illegible] Whitton for a place on the judicial ticket

(SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN)

SACRAMENTO April 12 —In the senate bills some important and others unimportant were withdrawn from the file in order to facilitate legislation on the most important questions before the legislature

The assembly chamber came very near being the scene of another sensation this morning before the opening of the session It seems that several days since a member of the house said in the presence of several persons that he would contribute one hundred dollars toward a fund to transport Mrs R F Fitzgerald wife of the proprietor of an ephemeral newspaper in this city out of Santa Clara valley Mrs Fitzgerald delivered a lecture Saturday evening at the theater here and had been upon the floor selling tickets, and a member stated that he thought she should not be allowed in the chamber These remarks came to the knowledge of Mrs Fitzgerald and this morning she appeared in the assembly chamber with a black snake whip concealed under her cloak She sent a messenger to the gentleman who had made the remarks stated above to ask him if she had been correctly informed The gentleman from Santa Clara replied that he had said so whereupon Mrs F stepped up and informed him that unless he immediately signed a retraction to be published to day she would horsewhip him The member looked into the gleaming eye of the irate female glanced around to see that his means of retreat were somewhat circumscribed and then sat down and penned a satisfactory retraction to the intense disgust of several who had gathered around to see the fun

BOARD OF TRADE

Regular Meeting Last Night | Important Communication from the Board of Underwriters Concerning a Fire Boat—River Appropriations etc

[illegible]

To the Hon the Board of Trade

DEAR SIRS [illegible] the underwriters [illegible] the city front [illegible] to the difficulty of [illegible] for the extinguishment of fire occurring east of Front street with our present facilities The [illegible] board would furnish an upon which to base an estimate of the value of the [illegible] annually passing through the warehouses on the river front and stored therein for a longer or shorter period but comprising as it will a very large percentage of the whole imports and exports of the country such an estimate is unnecessary Before the close of the present year the completion of the buildings now in course of construction or in contemplation east of Front street will constitute in insurance parlance an almost continuous frame range from Mill street on the south to beyond the northern limit of the city a distance of about two miles consisting for the most part of large warehouses and special hazards containing large quantities of inflammable material alongside of which lay a fleet of vessels—sail and steam. Many of the warehouses extend from street to street and even beyond and the ends of many streets terminating at the river are blocked up by buildings or have steep banks rendering access to the water with steam fire engines impossible and when possible with more or less danger of being cut off in case of a general fire In the event of fire in this locality the members of our fire department with their well earned character for efficiency would have to depend largely on the cisterns for a water supply North of G street there are none and those available south of that point, with two exceptions are small and liable to be exhausted at a critical moment, so that a fire under good headway might under certain not improbable conditions result in a general conflagration

The best method of supplying this deficiency in our system of fire protection would be a fire boat as provided in other cities similarly situated but the cost of construction and large running expenses render this inexpedient at the present time A substitute therefor could probably be secured at a comparatively small expense by the plan recommended on two occasions to the common council by Mayor Thompson viz That negotiations be attempted with the O R & N Co for the placing of powerful pumps on their new iron ferryboat, with hose and other appliances for use under the direction of the fire department By this means powerful streams from an inexhaustible supply could be placed where they would do the most good whether the fire be on the river front or any other place in the business portion of the city

In case of a flood like that of 1876 (considered not improbable the present season) a fire in the submerged portion of the city might prove very disastrous A hand engine can be worked in two or three feet of water but a steamer must have a dry fire box In such a case the value of such a boat would be inestimable It is thought satisfactory arrangements can be made with the company especially as they have valuable property on our front beside their warehouses on the east side and that the expected visit of President Villard renders this a proper time for action in the matter

The importance of this subject to the general public commends itself to your consideration aside from the pecuniary interest it has to the majority of your members The commercial prosperity of Portland depends in a great measure on the ability of her merchants to handle the products of the country cheaply and safely and while we are ready to offer you our protection the consideration therefor must be governed by the circumstances surrounding the risk, which we think the plan proposed will materially reduce and to this end we invite your co operation in such manner as you may deem advisable

Yours truly W S CALDWELL

Mr P C Schuyler moved that the city council be asked to comply with the recommendations contained in the communication carried

WELLS, FARGO & CO'S LETTER EXPRESS

The following resolution was adopted

WHEREAS It appears from a recent report of a commission originating with the post office department that the letter express system of Wells Fargo & Co has been rendered more efficient than the regular service there by becoming a competitor with the government for public patronage and that such letter express is disparaging to the dignity and standing of the postal department on this coast and for this and other reasons stated in the report the commission recommend that the postmaster general order Wells Fargo & Co to discontinue this branch of their business

Resolved That we deprecate any action on the part of the postmaster general having for its object the discontinuance of the letter express of Wells Fargo & Co that it has been a great public convenience for the past quarter of a century to the people of the Pacific slope and is still operated to the satisfaction and advantage of all

Believing that the revenues of the government are fully protected if not enhanced by this service and that the benefits conferred upon the public so far counterbalance all general as well as technical objections to the system and knowing that its prohibition would operate as a hindrance to the business interests of our people we respectfully ask that said Wells Fargo & Co be allowed to continue their government stamped letter service as hitherto and that the secretary of this board convey these our views to the postmaster general

JUDGE FIELD AS A CANDIDATE

Among the side shows of the great democratic caravan now again on its presidential march and moving towards its accustomed quadrennial defeat is a little boom for Judge Field. It has its place on the bills as an incident of the great show but is in many ways heavily overshadowed by the larger attractions. In few places has it yet been able to struggle into notice and then only as it is aided by Mr Tilden as an auxiliary of his main enterprise. It is said there is a Field bureau or something of that sort at Washington city the object of which is to work up a sentiment throughout the country in favor of Judge Field for the presidency. Its stock in trade is praise of Judge Field based on his recent dissenting opinions in favor of state sovereignty. He is presented as the constitutional savior of his country, christened and anointed for the purpose of bringing back our political system to the old theory of the supremacy of the states and the subordination of the general government. Mr Tilden smilingly encourages this proceeding knowing that in due time he will inherit the fruits of it. He is himself far too sagacious to let it appear that his own candidacy is based on the losing side of this old controversy. He knows that his party cannot go into the coming contest on this issue, because it dares not. It must assume a more national character and he knows it. Hence he can afford to deal patronizingly with the Field movement because it never can grow strong and in due time he can appropriate its results to himself. He will keep on good terms with the dogmatists of the state sovereignty school so that he can get their support at last but he will never commit the blunder of making their theory the corner stone of his own presidential aspirations.

But while it isn't likely that Judge Field can be nominated, of course such a result is not to be considered impossible particularly when the capacity of the democratic party for fatal blundering at critical times is taken into account. Judge Field is urged as a candidate solely because of his championship of alleged "state-rights principles. Now the constitution of the United States—the original constitution not the amendments—expressly confers on congress the right and power to make all regulations deemed necessary for election of senators and representatives. The only limit to this power is a clause which prohibits congress from changing the places of choosing senators from those established by the several states. In pursuance of the large power thus expressly granted congress several years ago enacted the election laws over which there has recently been so much controversy. But no argument worth the name has been or can be presented against their constitutional validity. Judge Field's alleged argument on which it is proposed to make him the state sovereignty candidate for the presidency, is only the chaff of those old dogmas of state supremacy which have been in issue from the time the state of South Carolina first proclaimed the doctrine of nullification. In the public mind the position of Judge Field is identical with the dogmas which produced the state sovereignty rebellion. No president will ever be elected on these refinements of secession logic,—for such are substantially the arguments on which sovereign powers are asserted for the states in these dissenting opinions. Of course it is easy to say that the questions are wholly different from those on which the arguments for secession were based. But the underlying theory is the same. It is a negation of the sovereignty of the United States, a denial of power in the national government to perform its functions against the will of the states. This indeed is a "canon of the ancient faith" of the democratic party but no man will ever be elected president of the United States who is conspicuously identified with it, or who makes it the chief article of his political creed. And the man who wants to be president had better make it a point to get himself into harmonious relations with this supreme political fact, if he is not there already. Judge Field, or any other aspirant, coming out as a candidate on the dogmas of state sovereignty, represents only an anachronism and a lost cause. As such representative, defeat is the inexorable consequence.

WAR BETWEEN DISTANT EMPIRES

Russia and China have been having serious misunderstanding, the details of which have not been very clearly made known but it is understood to grow out of boundary disputes. The extended frontier of each of these vast empires, where they come in contact with each other, appears to be a kind of indefinable and movable line, something like the frontiers of those parts of the Russian and British Indian empires which look toward each other across Central Asia. The three great empires of Russia, China and British India divide Asia between them. The policy of the British ministry during a year past has almost brought on a conflict between Great Britain and Russia in Turkistan and Afghanistan but as this policy has now been condemned very pointedly by the English people, it is likely to be wholly abandoned and the danger of war between the two powers, which has seemed so imminent, and which has attracted much of the attention of the world is probably over. Not so, however with the controversy between Russia and China. Long ago the advance of Russian conquest eastward brought that empire in conflict with another two or three thousand years older than that either of Russia or Britain. The meeting took place in the heart of Asia and the world has given little attention to it. But its fruits have been ripening, and now threaten to command the world's attention in a great Asiatic war. In one sense the roots of this threatened war reach back to the dawn of modern history. The present frontier of the Chinese in Asia marks the low tide of the great flood of Mongol invasion that once swept westward as far as the Adriatic and held an empire stretching from the Caspian sea and the Volga to the Pacific ocean for more than a century. In those days the small beginnings of the Russian empire were tributary to the great Mongol emperors, of whom Genghis Khan was the first and Kublai Khan the last. The Mongol power retired after the thirteenth century pushed back by the growth of the Turk in the south and the Russian in the north until it reached such manageable proportions as could be consolidated into the empire whose capital is at Pekin a union of Mongol Chinese and Tartar elements. This retreat left a broad belt on the high plains of central Asia abandoned by the Mongol and not invaded by the Turk or Russian. This remained with some vicissitudes including an occupation of a century and a half by the Usbek Turks an independent possession of the Tartar tribes not assimilated by the Mongols. Since the middle of the seventeenth century and until the middle of the nineteenth it has been divided into a number of independent khanates. Within the last twenty five years as we gather from a recent historical review of the relations of Russia and China, there have been disturbances on both sides of this independent belt. The Russians encroached upon the Tartar khanates on the west and the Tartars encroached upon the Chinese empire on the east. Chinese power and prestige in Central Asia has been weakened since the great Tartar insurrection in Chinese Turkestan in [illegible]. While the Russians were pushing into Turkestan one of the independent Tartar chiefs the famous Yakoob Beg was building up a kingdom for himself in Khokand partly out of the territory of scattered Tartar tribes partly at the expense of China. He made great inroads upon if he did not actually annex the Chinese province of Kuldja. But Yakoob Beg finally fell before the advance of the Russian power and the czar succeeded to his conquests including his claims upon Kuldja. This brought Russia into direct conflict with China and the last two years have been spent in diplomatic negotiations, China demanding and Russia evading the full return of the province to the former. But the czar alleges a treaty with China which allows him to keep Kuldja while on the other hand the Chinese government refuses to ratify the treaty and this refusal Russia is inclined to treat as an act of war. The conflict should it come might not, however be so unequal as many would suppose. China with her vast population can create armies of prodigious numerical strength and their recent intercourse with civilized nations has taught the Chinese a great deal about modern methods and implements of warfare. Orders for vast quantities of arms for China have recently been received both in England and the United States. The war, should it take place will not greatly affect the trade of the world or the fortunes of mankind and yet it will awaken no little interest throughout the world.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER BAR

At the meeting of the board of trade last night there was some discussion of recent statements respecting the Columbia river bar. From the fact that bad reports about the bar have recently gone abroad to the injury of our commercial interests the subject is one which certainly demands attention. For ourselves, we must say again that we have seen no reason whatever to conclude that the bar is actually shoaling as some have reported. The volume of the river is as great as it ever has been, and shoaling therefore would seem highly improbable. Again no accident has been reported which, so far as testimony goes might not easily have been averted by prudence, skill and tug boats of sufficient power. Under the circumstances we regretted to see the circular put forth in relation to the bar by our board of trade a short time ago. Emanating from so responsible a source it naturally would produce more alarm about the bar than any other publication ever made, not indeed so much for what it said as for what it suggested to those who had heard of recent losses at the bar and did not attribute them to their real causes. As yet there is no proof whatever that as deep vessels may not now cross in and out as ever visited the Columbia river. Hence it is not good policy to create the opposite impression, when there is no sufficient ground for it. In effect the circular by our board of trade was the most alarming statement ever made about the Columbia river bar, though of course it was intended to have precisely the opposite result. When it is recommended by such authority, right on the heels of accidents at the bar, that vessels which draw more than twenty feet should not make the venture to cross the consequence is about the same as if all vessels were warned away from so dangerous a locality.

Somebody in Oregon, it seems, has sent a dispatch to somebody in the eastern states, asserting that five of the six Oregon delegates to the democratic national convention are for Field. This probably is based on no better information than a paragraph in the expert's organ, and is likely to be as far out of the line of truth as his measurement of the printing. The convention distinctly refused to vote for Field. There was no enthusiasm whatever on presentation of his name. But when Tilden's name was mentioned there was a storm of applause. The convention would have instructed for him had it not been deemed advisable to allow the delegates freedom of action instead of tying them up by instructions. Hence it was only because instructions were deemed inexpedient that the delegation did not receive orders to vote for Tilden. The few Field men in the convention made a second effort just at the close of proceedings to carry instructions for Field, hoping perhaps to succeed in the confusion of adjournment, but the trick was discovered and the effort to carry instructions for Field was squelched a second time. Under these circumstances it seems somewhat out of the way to claim the delegation for Field that is if the wishes of the party in this state are to be represented.

Well informed persons who know what is going on in eastern political circles and who observe things too keenly to be deceived by reports started by intriguers to disguise their real intentions insist that there is nothing in the story that the 'stalwart' senators—Conkling Cameron and Logan are going to take Mr Edmunds as a presidential candidate and gives as a reason that he is not the kind of a man the stalwarts want that they do not trust him. He would not if elected be the president of half a dozen senators or even of the republican party but of the whole country. He would be likely to have ideas of his own about patronage and the civil service which would materially interfere with the plans which the senatorial syndicate are supposed to entertain. But qualities in Edmunds which are supposed to make him objectionable to the machinists are just those which will give him strength with the people and perhaps the senators may come to their senses enough to look for a candidate who can be elected and take their chance of patronage afterwards.

The printer of Scribner's Monthly Mr Theodore L DeVinne begins in the April number of that magazine what promises to be a very interesting and valuable series of articles upon The Growth of Wood Cut Printing. The subject is treated in its historical relations and is illustrated with a large number of very interesting fac similes of old wood cuts and letter press. We do not generally realize what a modern art artistic and successful wood engraving is. Mr De Vinne shows this and has a theory of his own why it is so. Large and finely executed blocks of wood could not be printed with type on the old stamp presses because the impression necessary for the picture even when the press was strong enough [illegible] would split the type and break the block. The steam roller press which gives a powerful impression gently and gradually and [illegible] variation in the pressure by overlaying [illegible] the printing of fine wood engravings. Mr De Vinne's next paper will deal with the modern art of engraving on wood.

The Hon Jacob Mueller ex-lieutenant governor of Ohio and now the controlling spirit of the Wachter am Erie of Cleveland and the leading German daily paper of northern Ohio, has been making a careful study of the German feeling in Ohio especially in the northern part, on the presidential question. Mr. Mueller says that from his observations and knowledge of the German character he is satisfied that nothing can take place which would reconcile the feelings of the Germans to Grant. They are dead set against him and under no circumstances would they vote for him. If he be the Chicago nominee Ohio will surely give the democratic candidate from [illegible] 000 to [illegible] 000 majority and the chances would be good for the majority to reach even 7 000.

The Boston Post has views on the woman question and puts the conundrum: Do the men of most correct habits and most [illegible] as a rule [illegible] the most frequent [illegible] from the [illegible] generally have to step as [illegible] the [illegible] drawing room [illegible] they prefer to keep in the [illegible] some [illegible] become [illegible] the man of [illegible] gallant and agreeable [illegible] popular [illegible] among the gentlemen.

Only [illegible] to the Chicago convention [illegible] who can pledge themselves to attend in person. This is highly important in order that the republicans of the state may have full and proper representation in the convention. If all the delegates are present the fact will add force to the voice of the state which if properly represented will at all times be against the scheme of the third term and will make no compromise with it.

Senator Logan's speech on the Fitz John Porter case which was held for revision has now appeared in the Congressional Record. It fills forty eight pages of that publication and is by far the longest speech ever printed in it. Its appearance was delayed to allow of the preparation in Philadelphia of a lithographed map of the famous battle ground which was the first map ever published in the Record.

A fifteen minutes past 2 o'clock this morning a fire was discovered by the police in a large two story wooden building at the northwest corner of First and Main streets occupied as a wagon and blacksmith shop by John Roemer In a few minutes the flames had entirely enveloped the building and had spread to a small livery and feed stable adjoining on the north and at the time of writing (2 30) all are burning fiercely The fire department has just arrived and [illegible] may be able to save the adjoining property but the situation is [illegible] as the extreme as wooden buildings adjoin on every side It is impossible at this hour to determine the origin of the fire or to estimate the loss Mr Roemer's shops cannot possibly fail of complete destruction Most of the horses in the stable have been rescued and it is thought that those remaining can be got out

Later 2 45—The fire is now thought to be under control The owner of the buildings is not known by the police Roemer's stock is insured in the Commercial Union for $800

NATURAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION

[illegible] ON THE SPECTROSCOPE [illegible]

The spectroscope was the subject upon which Dr E. G Rex addressed the Natural Science Association on last Friday evening. The spectroscope is an instrument by means of which the existence of different substances in the most minute quantities is detected through the modifications they produce in the spectrum when burned That is they modify the appearance of the series of colors into which white light is separated by a prism Beginning with a description of the principles of prismatic reflection the lecturer with the assistance of the calcium light and a bisulphide of carbon prism proceeded to demonstrate the decomposition of white light by throwing the spectrum upon the screen where the various colors composing it were seen in a beautiful series

Then by burning different chemicals in the flame the line or lines peculiar to each appeared in the spectrum having invariable positions Common salt for instance causing the appearance of a single yellow line and potash two red lines and one violet line these lines corresponding in position to similar lines in the solar and stellar spectra afford one of the proofs of the existence in the sun and stars of the substances producing them The lecturer described as much of spectrum analysis as his time permitted

The membership of the association having become very large the time is thought to have arrived when measures should be taken to ensure a regular and high order of scientific compositions Accordingly the following amendments were passed designed to introduce such a system as well as a classification of members

* * * Every active member shall be required to deliver an address or read an essay prepared by himself not oftener than once a year provided always that any active member may discharge himself from the obligation to deliver an address or read an essay as above provided during the current year by the payment of fifty cents per month in addition to the regular dues The executive committee shall decide upon and designate the time of delivery of lectures by the members Any member failing to deliver his lecture at the designated time to the satisfaction of the association shall pay a fine of $10 Tickets may be issued at the rate of $5 per year, entitling the holders thereof to attend without other charge all lectures and addresses delivered before the association and to attend all its meetings save business meetings only, and to have free access to its rooms and library, but not to participate in any manner in the management of the affairs of the association Lectures of unusual excellence may at the request of the association be repeated in public

MAKING CRACKERS BY STEAM

An Interesting Visit to the New Steam Bakery of Liebe & Hoelbing

Nothing so indicates the growth of a community so accurately as increase in the amount of breadstuffs consumed Ten years ago a few small bakeries supplied the bread crackers and cake required by the people of Portland but the demand has grown so great that ordinary hand work cannot supply it Messrs Liebe & Hoelbing of the Oregon bakery last fall [illegible] found for the trade is growing so rapidly that it became necessary to call into requisition the latest and most approved machinery As soon as the season permitted they began the erection of a steam bakery on the northwest corner of East Park and G streets, [illegible] equipped it and supplied it with the best machinery obtainable Everything [illegible] machinery [illegible] was raised yesterday [illegible] at the invitation of Mr Liebe an OREGONIAN reporter visited the establishment and witnessed the interesting work of making crackers by steam

The building is 48 by 60 feet two stories and a basement The boiler is [illegible] and the engine 20 horse power The oven is a wonder in its way and is as near as it can be described on paper, like a large [illegible] wheel It is inclosed in a solid brick work 21 feet long 16 feet wide and 21 feet in diameter The pans twelve in number hang on pivots attached to the rims of large iron wheels revolving on an axle and fitting closely to the brick work Each pan has a surface [illegible] and when [illegible] full there is baking [illegible] superficial feet of dough The pans are fed through a door one foot wide extending across the brick work The oven is heated by coke from a furnace in the basement

The process of making crackers is quite interesting The flour [illegible] first placed in a large trough and enough water mixed with it to make [illegible] It is then thrown into a hopper and thoroughly mixed by means of a spiral shaft From here it is taken and run through [illegible] steel rollers which crush every lump From the rollers it is carried to the [illegible] machine which prepares the dough into sheets of the desired length breadth and thickness The sheet is then placed on the cracker machine proper which resembles an ordinary steam planer It is sprinkled with flour carried through another pair of rollers then under a revolving brush then under the stamp which falling cuts the dough into the form desired for crackers From here one belt of canvas carries the waste dough to a trough, while another carries the stamped dough to flat wire plates which are taken up and placed on the pans in the oven After the crackers are done, they are carried to the second story by means of buckets on an endless chain of canvas and there packed in cases It requires eight men to feed and run the machinery on the lower floor and four are employed in the packing room The bakery will turn out, working ten hours a day 150 to 175 cases of crackers per day

There is also on the lower floor an ingenious machine for making fancy little cakes and one for grinding cracker dust Messrs Liebe & Hoelbing are too busy now filling advance orders to allow visitors admittance but before the end of this month will set apart a day when the public will be invited to call and witness the process of cracker making, which to most persons will be an interesting novelty

POSITIVE VIRTUES!

The most of the so called great remedies possess only that sort of negative or passive virtue which, while it may not often cure disease will seldom endanger life Bristol's Sarsaparilla is equally safe, but it is possessed of that positive or aggressive virtue which will not tolerate the presence of disease or impure blood or humors in the human system where it is used and thus it is that it always effects complete and lasting cures

Appreciation of Values.

By reference to The Oregonian of Feb 15th it will be found that city property has advanced twenty five per cent during the past year As there has been no excitement the rise is wholly attributable to the increasing immigration and the growing confidence inspired by our numerous railroad enterprises and the development of our many natural resources that have hitherto slumbered for lack of energetic men to develop them

It is True,

That of all real estate investments the homestead plan is the best and safest, as all who invest are interested in making the whole property more valuable To illustrate: Suppose A builds a house on his lot, and B owns a lot adjoining B gets the benefit of A's improvement while A is not injured thereby This philosophy will apply to the entire property

We have donated a lot to each of the principal churches for church purposes

In addition to the above two lots are set apart for public school purposes

Division.

The division of this property will take place when the lots are all sold or in any event not later than the 28th February, 1881,

at the Mechanics Pavilion commencing at 10 o'clock A M public notice of which will be given by publication in two principal journals in the state.

It will be made in the manner decided upon by a majority of the purchasers in the Homestead Parties interested may appoint proxies to act for them if they desire to do so Parties who do not attend at the time of the division either in person or by proxy will be bound by the plan settled upon by the majority of those who do so attend

It is suggested by the purchasers that division might be made by placing the number of each lot and block in a wheel or box and the name of each party interested in the homestead in another—then a name will be drawn from one and a number from the other and the lot so drawn deeded to the person whose name is so drawn when all payments are made.

All but the first installment must be paid at the banking house of Ladd & Tilton in the city of Portland

OGDEN AND PORTLAND RAILROAD.

A [illegible] STARTING [illegible] ON THE FINAL SURVEY—IMPORTANT DETAILS

From the Boise Statesman April [illegible]

There has been a [illegible] talk [illegible] building a railroad from Ogden or some point on the Utah Northern [illegible] this valley to the Columbia river. It will be recollected that Col Thielsen, chief engineer of the Oregon railway [illegible] and made a survey down Boise river from Little Camas Prairie [illegible] the route [illegible] with some of our citizens through Big Camas Prairie and the Wood river country to the terminus of the Utah Northern at Blackfoot and from thence to Ogden to meet [illegible] Gould of the Union Pacific and Mr Villard of the Oregon railway. He made a favorable report on the whole route from the Columbia river and gave a careful description of the country and made an estimate of the probable business that would come to the road. Soon after Mr Thielsen came Col W. Wolcott's surveying party, who started from Ogden and came [illegible] Snake river to the [illegible] route of the Utah Northern and then through the Wood river country across Big Camas Prairie and down this river to its mouth, then up Willow creek in Oregon via Canyon City to The Dalles. Col Wolcott and party were sent out in the interest of the U P railroad and were out all summer and until late in the fall on their route. On their return they took the line of the U.P. In [illegible] through the Malheur country. During the past winter we have heard very little about the proposed work on this line either from the West or East. The attentions of J Gould and other railroad men in the East towards building the Southern Pacific and of Villard and party in the West in building roads in the Columbia river valley led us to doubt the possibility of their doing much if anything on the Ogden and Columbia river road this summer. Matters are however presenting a better aspect. Messrs Virtue and Foster of Baker City passed through here on Saturday night and told us that they saw Col Wolcott in Omaha and that he was coming on to this route again this summer with another surveying party. We also learn from the Omaha Herald that Col Wolcott has already started from that place with a party of thirty surveyors to make a final survey of the line of the Ogden & Portland railroad, the preliminary surveys having been made. The Herald says that he will start from the Utah & Northern, at Port Neuf Station, 148 miles above Ogden. He will run west to the Wood river district, and from thence to Boise City, thence through Oregon, but the Herald does not say in what direction, whether by Canyon City and the John Day route or up Burnt river and through Powder and Grand Ronde Valleys and over the Blue Mountains to Walla Walla.

The Herald very correctly estimates that 400 miles of this route is contiguous to a rich mining country on either side of the road, and also traverses some of the most valuable agricultural lands in Idaho. The Herald says that probably not over 75 or 100 miles will be built this season. This looks as if there was a fair prospect for starting the road this way from the East and should that be the case the western end will be built over the Blue Mountains this year.

The activity of the spring season is not excessive, but there is still a very fair volume of trade, with about the usual promptness in settlements. In some respects the anticipations which many merchants entertained of the most active season ever experienced in this city have been realized, but generally the business has not come up to the expectations. The firms who have been fortunate enough to secure the patronage of the railroad builders have made more than the usual amount of sales, but the commissaries of these large corporations are selected with special reference first, as to their ability to buy at the lowest possible rates, and second, as to the dispatch with which they can transact a large amount of business and therefore merchants are generally well pleased to have the trade of these companies though the profits on transactions with them are often very small. This trade in addition to the usual average business of the season about measures the volume of business at present.

The wheat market has been very gradually settling for some weeks past and a majority of dealers are doing nothing while others continue a sort of hand-to-mouth business at a range of prices from $1 70@1 75 per cental. Sellers at any figure are scarce.

Oats continue firm at last quotations, with a good demand for the local trade and a light export call.

Eggs are weak at 15 cents per dozen, and the market well supplied.

The wool trade has fairly opened though receipts so far have been light owing to the fact that up to a few days ago, the weather had been continuously very cold or very wet, retarding shearing to a later date than usual. Our San Francisco dispatches would seem to indicate that market to be less excited than this. While quotations there are given at 35@37½ cents per pound, there are dealers quoting as high as 40 cents, though this figure cannot be taken as the standard of the market, except for extra choice quality for which the demand is not so great as for common grades at prices ranging from 30 to 35 cents. The eastern markets are reported steady at the latest advance but not much disposition toward another rise is manifested. A good many growers have already contracted their spring clip, the prices offered being generally quite satisfactory. There may possibly be a slight advance on some grades before the season is over, but about the average highest point is believed to have been already reached.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

Review of the Chicago Grain Business, with Comments on the Market—Total Sales, Etc

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

CHICAGO April 10 —The grain deal has been more distributed during the past week than for some time and the belief that the cliques are for the time at least quiescent and allowing the market to take its own course has gained ground. This naturally brings to the front a large number of smaller speculators who know enough not to submit to the 'milking' process, and who when the deal appears to be concentrated in one small coterie of gentlemen, are very apt to withdraw and let the country trade stand the losses that necessarily come to all outsiders from such a combination.

There has been quite a struggle between the bulls and bears during the week but the bears have generally been in the ascendant. The fact is patent, however, that the markets at present are almost entirely weaker [illegible] advices might be. Prices ruled lower on the fine days and firmer on the unseasonable days. Yesterday when the sky was overcast and the air chilly and snow began to fly scores of buyers [illegible] and the market for wheat advanced [illegible] from yesterday's lowest point. With a week or two of unfavorable weather it is not impossible that prices would reach nearly the highest [illegible] yet. The season is at a critical stage and many apprehensions are felt that in view of a warm open winter and the summer like spring there may be a disastrous seeding time in store for the northwest.

To-day's markets were all strong and higher. Provisions reached the lowest point for many [illegible] during the week. Sales for the May option were as follows: Wheat $1 11@1 14⅛, [illegible], $10 05@10 [illegible] lard [illegible] oats 30@[illegible] pork, $10 [illegible]. Closing May prices were, wheat $1 13⅛, corn, 36 bid, oats 30⅛, pork $10 42½, lard $7 [illegible]. Closing cash prices wheat $1 12, corn 35 for fresh, oats [illegible] rye [illegible] barley 75@76, pork $10 30, lard $6 [illegible].

Receipts for the week: Wheat 145,000 bushels, corn 784,000 bushels, oats 185,000 [illegible] wheat 218,000, corn 856,000, oats [illegible]. Receipts same time last year: Wheat 858,000, corn, 820,000, oats 217,000.

Shipments wheat 640,000, corn, 1,063,000, oats 351,000. Including all cereals the aggregate movement has been about six million bushels of grain. The shipments of corn reach a most unprecedented figure, entirely on account of the sailing of vessels in port which have been loaded with corn. It is noticeable that with higher prices for wheat there is very much less coming in than last year and that corn receipts are largely decreased from last week. Altogether the outlook is favorable for a good market [illegible] for all the grain in store here.

THE GENUINE

CELEBRATED

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint,

[illegible]

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low, and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER

DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them A FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

MIDDLE AGED MEN.

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits a ropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milkish hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

THE COMMON SCHOOLS TEACH—WHAT

[From the Boston Herald.]

It is probably safe to say that [illegible] of the children who grow up in Massachusetts get all the school teaching they ever [illegible] get in the primary and grammar grades. The number of these who pursue their studies in the high schools and academies is comparatively to the whole mass very small. There are, therefore, few subjects better worth knowing something about, and we might add very few about which so little apparently is really known, as the amount or rather the practical value, of the education imparted to the mass of children in our common schools. What does it amount to after all? That a good deal is taught there on a great many subjects no one questions. But what is its practical value? How much is taught which is of the slightest real use in ordinary after life?

These queries are very forcibly suggested by Mr. George A. Walton's special report on the common schools in Norfolk county, which forms a portion of the recently issued forty-third annual report of the state board of education. A more interesting and suggestive public document has not recently seen the light. In his preliminary report as secretary of the board Mr Dickinson mildly suggests that it is not altogether flattering to the pride of a Massachusetts citizen. It certainly is not. It is better than flattering, however. It is instructive. Here at last are the facts. For many years now Massachusetts has, so far as its common school system was concerned, lived along in a dangerous condition of self-satisfaction. We have shut our eyes and folded our hands, and basked under the gaze of an admiring world. But after all, was the world really admiring? and was there much to admire?

The common sense observer outside of educational circles, is apt to suppose that the object of the common school is to give children the elements of education. Among these elements reading, writing and ciphering must figure. In after life, also, a knowledge of reading, writing and ciphering is of practical value. The power of writing in an emergency, a letter three or four lines long, of doing a simple sum in addition correctly and quickly, of reading rapidly, all these are something more than accomplishments. Are they to-day generally and really imparted to the mass of our children through the existing common school methods? We certainly pay enough to have them imparted. Upward of four millions a year, according to the report of the board of education. Are these first elements really imparted, however?

To judge by Mr Walton's report, if the schools of Norfolk county are fair specimens of those of the state, they generally are not imparted. In place of them we are receiving the most curious conglomeration of antiquated rubbish. Grammar, rules and oral spelling are being palmed off in place of facility in writing—parsing in place of reading—arithmetical rules learned by rote, in place of familiarity with figures. More utterly useless results or methods it would be impossible to suggest.

The report reads like a sober, cautious, common sense educational idea. [illegible] 212 schools examined by Mr Walton are not a fair sample of those throughout the state is improbable. In the report Mr. Walton says that they are [illegible] of the fourteen counties in Massachusetts Norfolk is third in the liberality of its appropriations for school purposes, and first in [illegible] of school attendance. That the tests [illegible] on the scholars by Mr Walton in the course of his examinations were difficult [illegible] cannot be suggested, for they [illegible] themselves, and it is plain that they [illegible]. To call upon a child that had [illegible] years at school to write a few words [illegible] mother; to call on scholars who had [illegible] years at school to write a short [illegible] of a story, or do simple sums in addition or division, or read at sight from a [illegible] seen before—these surely are not [illegible]. They are simply practical, not [illegible]. The unfairness comes in when in [illegible] to them, you receive such average [illegible] those, lithographed fac similes, of [illegible] printed by Mr Walton on pages [illegible], 214, 218, 219, 234-9 and 247 8 of his [illegible]. There is, too, no escape from them. They are—the average results of years of Massachusetts schooling.

It is no excuse for the showing to say that children were not taught in this way. Far from being an excuse, this is the worst [illegible] word which can be said in condemnation of our existing common school methods. The scholars can rattle off rules of grammar and parse like automatons, but they are not taught to frame a written sentence (p. 144). They can gabble rules of arithmetic like parrots; but they cannot do the simplest unaccustomed problem. [illegible] They can painfully imitate with the [illegible] sentiment at the head of a page in a copy book; but they gaze in bewilderment at the examiner who calls on them to write a [illegible] (p. 266). They can spell anything in the spelling class; but, when they sit down [illegible] hand, the word "too" is spelt wrong [illegible] by 359 out of 1122 of those who [illegible], while the various misspellings of the word "scholar" fill a whole page, and are [illegible] by hundreds; and "which" is [illegible] only 60 times in a hundred, [illegible] but 54 times! (p. 148). What a showing for Massachusetts is this? [illegible] any one to frame an excuse for it? [illegible] within ten miles of Boston, are found [illegible] and familiar use every antiquated [illegible] of school instruction, and with the [illegible] result—children with their heads [illegible] full of conventional rules, not one of which they can or ever will be able to practically apply—rules which have not to them the slightest significance. And to the acquisition of these rules the practical ends of education are wantonly and systematically sacrificed.

There is, however, another side to the subject, and it is fortunate that there is. The [illegible] value and interest of Mr Walton's report lie in the fact that here, for the first time, actual results, and not opinions or generalizations, are spread before us. The examination papers of the children are presented in lithographed fac similes. There are not so many of these as there should be, but those [illegible] are most interesting. They show more vividly than could possibly be shown in any other way the results of different methods of instruction. Some few of the [illegible] what Mr. Walton calls "rational methods." The names of the different towns he wisely suppresses, substituting letters of the alphabet for them. The statistics on page [illegible] compared with those on page 40 of the [illegible] at the close of the general report, [illegible], however the necessary clew. The most noticeable feature in the examinations is the showing made by the schools of Quincy. In the amount expended on each of the children in her schools, that town stands [illegible] in the county, but in the results [illegible] she is largely first in every branch except arithmetic. The fac similes of average compositions and letters from that town, as given on pages 216 and 240 of the report, are all that could be desired. Next in excellence to Quincy are Brookline, Hyde Park, Canton and Milton, though in the grammar tests Milton was twelfth, and in the primaries Brookline was sixth. Next to Nahant—that sanctuary of the tax-dodger—Milton and Brookline are more liberal in their school appropriations than any other places in Massachusetts. They average $30 a year for each child to $21 56 in Boston, and $14 80 throughout the state. [illegible] of these towns equaled, under Mr. Walton's tests, either Quincy, which was far ahead of them, or Canton, which spent but $11 05 for each of its scholars. Why was this? Mr. Walton tells us why it was in the [illegible] of language. Money alone will never do it. The judicious expenditure of money does it every time. Says Mr. Walton: "The examinations clearly indicated that more depends upon the supervision of the schools than upon all other causes combined." Quincy and Canton have thorough, systematic and intelligent supervision. Brookline and Milton have not. Accordingly by employing very expensive teachers or a great number of them, and spending more money than is spent anywhere else, these last named towns get fair results, but still results poorer than those obtained elsewhere by a more judicious expenditure of half the amount.

After all, however, the leading feature of this report is an encouraging one. Though it is a rude awakening from a pleasant dream of self-content, [illegible] show [illegible] system [illegible] hours and our boasted educational preeminence, the methods which Horace Mann found in use and energetically [illegible] 40 years ago still enjoy in Massachusetts [illegible] life, though it does show that what [illegible] schools do teach they [illegible] teach or know how to teach reading, writing and ciphering, though the report [illegible] yet it shows also that progress [illegible] made. Though the day breaks slow [illegible] at last. Few things in the world [illegible] willingly to change than [illegible]. Your true pedagogue is an ingrained Bourbon. It, however, he can at least [illegible] certain towns of Norfolk [illegible] rational methods of instruction have recently been adopted and the children [illegible]. As we in Boston know the example of Quincy is contagious. [illegible] them get a foothold and the rational methods will prevail to [illegible] that the mass of our children after eight [illegible] years schooling will ever know how to read, write and cipher. To assert this in view of the past and Mr Walton's report requires we know much even as a grain of mustard seed. That faith we have, and by virtue of it we believe that the little leaven found by Mr. Walton is going to leaven the whole lump.

DECISION IN THE U S DISTRICT COURT DEADY, J

U. S. District Court—District of Oregon.

Thursday, April 8, 1880.

The United States vs Frank Osborn. No. [illegible]. Information for disposing of spirituous liquor to an Indian.

1st. An Indian under charge of Indian agent within the meaning of the law prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquor to him [illegible].

(2) [illegible] Indians are not born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States and are therefore not citizens thereof within the purview of the 14th amendment.

(3) Idem. The State of Oregon may make an Indian a voter and the United States may make him a citizen, in which latter case by the operation of the 15th amendment he would become a voter of the state in which he resides if otherwise qualified according to its laws; but an Indian cannot become a citizen himself and without the consent in some form of the United States.

4) Idem. The United States has not conferred citizenship upon Indians in Oregon.

DEADY, J

This is an information filed by the district attorney against Frank Osborn charging him with having disposed of spirituous liquor to an Indian under the charge of an Indian agent contrary to § 2139 of the R. S.

The defendant pleaded not guilty and submitted to be tried by the court without the intervention of a jury.

The evidence, in which there is no conflict, proves that the Indian in question belongs to one of the tribes on the Warm Spring reservation, under charge of Indian agent Capt. John Smith; that with the consent of the agent and his mother he has lived off the agency with Mr Miller near Eugene in this state for the past 8 or 10 years as a domestic, and was therefore commonly called Joe Miller; that within a few months since he left the house of Mr Miller and has been working in the neighborhood for some of the farmers and occasionally making his home with an Indian, living in the vicinity, upon a portion of the public land under the homestead act and called Indian Jim; that this Indian belongs to one of the coast reservations but has not resided there for some 15 years, and claims to be a citizen and voter of Oregon; that a short time since and after Joe had left the Millers, he went to Eugene a few miles distant from his former residence and asked the defendant, who kept a drug store there, for a pint of alcohol.

The defendant knew the Miller family and Joe, as an Indian who lived with them and bore their name, and when Joe asked for the alcohol he asked him if he was Miller's boy, and Joe answered yes, whereupon he sold him the liquor. Agent Smith has known of the whereabouts of this Indian Joe since he left the reservation, and claims the right to return him there whenever he thinks proper, and his mother is still living there.

Upon these facts and the authority of U S v. Holliday, 3 Wall, 418, there can be no doubt but that Joe is an Indian under charge of an agent appointed by the U. S. In this case the Indian to whom the liquor was disposed lived upon a piece of land which he occupied in severalty and voted at the elections as he was authorized to do by the laws of the state of Michigan.

There appears to be an impression that Indians, situated as Jim and Joe are, that is who live off the reservation and among and more or less after the manner of white people, are citizens and voters of the state, and therefore it is no crime to give them spirituous liquors. But this is a mistake. The Indians are not a portion of the political community called the "People of the United States." And although not foreign nations or persons they have always been regarded and treated as distinct and independent political communities. Worcester v. The State of Georgia, 5 Pet 515. The Cherokee Nation v. The State of Georgia, Id. 1.

What effect if any, the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. 566, § 2079 R. S.), which declares that no Indian tribe within the territory of the U. S. "shall be acknowledged or recognized as an independent nation, tribe or power with whom the U. S. may contract by treaty," may have upon this question, it is not necessary now to consider. Probably none, as in effect it is only a declaration that thereafter the U. S. will not contract with the Indian tribes but will regulate its relations with them and their affairs by law—by act of congress rather than the treaty making power. And whether, and how far, congress can thus limit the constitutional power of the president "by and with the advice and consent of the senate to make treaties" (Art. 2, § 2, Con. U. S.) is another question of a more serious character.

The constitution of this state limits the privilege of suffrage to "white males" (Art. 2, § 2, Con. Or.). But by the operation of the 14th and 15th amendments this word "white" is in effect stricken out of the constitution of the state. The 14th one provides that—"All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state where they reside"; and the 15th one declares that—"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude." The result is that citizens of the United States cannot be excluded from the polls on account of color. Therefore Negroes born in the United States, being born "subject to the jurisdiction" thereof, became citizens and voters.

But the Indian tribes in the United States, or the members thereof, are not born "subject to the jurisdiction" of the United States. McKay v. Campbell, 2 Saw. 132. There are no Indians in Oregon that were born subject to its jurisdiction, or that have since become so. In the report of the senate judiciary committee made by Mr Carpenter, December 14, 1870, it was stated that the Indian tribes or the members thereof are not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and therefore such Indians are not made citizens by the 14th amendment. 1 Dillon 348 note.

The state may make any Indian a voter, or the United States may make him a citizen, and then by operation of the 15th amendment he becomes a voter within the state where he resides, if he is otherwise qualified according to its laws.

By the treaty of January 31, 1855 (10 Stat. 1157) the tribal organization and relation of the Wyandotte Indians in Kansas with the United States, was dissolved and terminated, and they were made "citizens of the United States to all intents and purposes."

But an Indian cannot make himself a citizen of the United States without the consent and co-operation of the government.

The fact that he has abandoned his nomadic life or tribal relations and adopted the habits and manners of civilized people may be a good reason why he should be made a citizen of the United States, but does not of itself make him one. To be a citizen of the United States is a political privilege which no one not born to can assume without its consent in some form.

The Indians in Oregon not being born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States were not born citizens thereof, and I am not aware of any law or treaty by which any of them have been made so since.

It follows as a matter of course that the defendant in disposing of spirituous liquors to the Indian Joe when and as he did was guilty of a violation of the statute.

But as it appears probable that the act of the defendant was the result of carelessness or a misapprehension of the status of the Indian Joe, rather than any guilty purpose to violate the law, I think it is a proper case for a mere nominal punishment. The defendant is therefore sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar.

The first crib for the sea wall at the entrance of Coos Bay was sunk a few days ago. The depth of water where the wall commences is 8 feet at low tide, but the water deepens rapidly from this point, and it is probable that the length of the next crib will reach 12 feet of water. There were two scow loads of rock ready for delivery, and the whole amount, 550 tons, were thrown into the cribs before night. There was a large force of men employed in handling the rock. Including the force ordinarily employed in crib building, several other cribs are ready to be towed down, and they will be placed as fast as the rock required to secure them can be got out and taken to the place of delivery.

NOTES FROM WASCO COUNTY

LOST VALLEY, April 5, 1880

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Here in the northern part of Wasco county we have a large scope of farming land, which people have just found out is valuable for homes and is now being sought after by many enterprising men.

The weather during the past winter has been quite severe for this part of the world, yet stock upon the whole have fared reasonably well and weathered through in better condition and with less loss than could have been supposed. Sheep men have lost a good many lambs, owing to the lateness of spring weather. Cattle, so far as I have observed, are nearly all right. Horses are thin in flesh generally, but are feeling well and are healthy.

Farmers are pretty well through with their farming operations, and are planting gardens. Grass is springing up, and everything and everybody are in good spirits.

As we approach the Blue mountains the spring is hardly so forward as lower toward the Columbia, but if we are allowed to judge, we think a settler would have more advantage on these fine flats running out from the mountains than further down, from the fact that grass is more plenty, water also, and the close proximity to fine pine timber.

And speaking of timber reminds me of the want of good saw mills. One good mill is greatly needed and would help develop this fine country wonderfully. Many people are disappointed with the turn of affairs in this line, and a good mill would meet with solid support. A million feet of good merchantable lumber would find ready sale within the next twelve months.

As we follow our wanderings toward the east we see numerous wants that pertain to a new country.

A good drug store is badly needed, and a general merchandise store with a full stock would do a good business.

A grist mill would do a flourishing business, as the people have to go to the river or Pendleton for their flour.

The people are alive to their political interests, and as far as I have been enabled to ascertain they are in for Blaine of Maine, with Senator Booth of California to play second. Although I met one party that was a third termer, I don't know who his second man is, but presume it will be St. Denis as soon as he gets out of the Bay City.

THE SQUIRREL PEST

April 3d, 1880.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

While listening very attentively to the many interesting questions discussed through the columns of THE OREGONIAN, permit me to broach another subject which directly interests a large portion of the people in the upper Columbia river country. I have tried to convince my good neighbors that all ought to unite in the destruction of these little pests, but without avail. Persons owning land and not farming throw all the burden of killing off these squirrels upon those who wish to farm, and many are lying indolent who will neither farm nor keep their squirrels at home. I would desire to call the attention of our legislators to this subject. We need a law to compel all land holders where squirrels are to do an equal part to destroy them.

LABOR AND CAPITAL

The Present Deadlock Among the Fishermen of the Lower Columbia—The Condition Declared to be Worse than Kearneyism

[illegible] Worse than Kearneyism [illegible] mark that brought [illegible] ment [illegible] interest in the subject [illegible] up the following items [illegible] adorn a [illegible]

In this case [illegible] not the tale of one [illegible] cannery [illegible] representing an average of about $[illegible] each, invested in the [illegible] an immense capital to run the salmon to the various markets of the world.

Estimating on last year's basis of 130,000 cases, which cannot be produced short of $3 per case, we have a cash for a floating capital of $1,500,000. In addition to this they have $1,000,000 invested in buildings, nets, boats, etc., making together the astounding sum of $2,500,000 in a business limited to about three months of the year. This sum I am persuaded will be considered an [illegible] rather than an over estimate of the money investment and liabilities of these thirty canneries. If to the foregoing we add the interest at [illegible] per cent on the money planted in the cannery buildings, nets, etc., viz. $80,000, and the interest 10 per cent on the floating cost liabilities for six months, amounting to $1,500,000, viz. $[illegible],000, we have $165,000 to be paid out for interest alone, leaving out of account entirely insurance, depreciation of property values by destruction of nets, boats, etc., etc. It is safe to say that not less than $3,000,000 is involved by these thirty canneries as an expression of their faith in the salmon harvest of the present season.

So much for the capital side of the fishery question, by which employment is furnished for about 900 to 1000 boats and labor for about 2000 fishermen.

The next part of this tale refers to the relation of this capital to these laborers on the water—what terms does capital propose to labor?

We are sure these are generous even to magnanimity. They give the fishermen two thirds of all the fish taken at a stipulated price for each salmon caught, and retain only one third for the requisite outfit for the fishermen employed—each outfit representing a money value of from $750 to $1000 for the boat, net, sails, etc.

The average take of fish for each boat may be set down at 1500 to 2000 for the season.

Last year the canneries paid 50 cents for each fish taken. This would net $750 to $1000 for each boat, i. e. from $250 to $350 for each boat puller and $500 to $650 for each boat steerer or boss fisherman, for four months work. Now it is to be borne in mind that these fishermen have not a single dollar's property risk, but are supplied with every requisite by the cannerymen.

Now the part of this tale remaining is this—how are the fishermen conducting themselves? They are on a strike. This strike has two parts. First, they are determined not to fish unless they can have 60 cents for each salmon taken; second, they are determined that no man shall fish unless 60 cents is paid.

No one will blame the fishermen for asking 60 cents for each fish they may catch, nor for refusing to fish if they do not get it. But every American citizen will and must condemn the avowed determination that no man shall fish unless 60 cents is paid. This is worse than Kearneyism. When 1500 or 2000 such men, without a dollar's interest, can with impunity hold the rod of socialism in terrorem over the heads of enterprising capitalists and thus virtually lock up $3,000,000, it certainly is no stretch of imagination to say that is worse than Kearneyism.

This is the state of things on the Columbia today. A question arises: shall capital be driven from our midst? If not, what is the remedy? It does seem, as a measure of self protection, that the cannery men should immediately prepare a schedule of wages for fishermen for next season, in which generous compensation to fishermen should be offered. Let the same be seasonably published to the fishermen of the world, inviting them to participate in the fishing of next season, and this dead lock, worse than Kearneyism, need not occur again.

P. S.—It is probable that the rise in tin and other requisites will raise the cost of preparing the salmon to $4 per case. The foregoing estimates have all been made as favorable to the labor side of this question as possible.

TWIN BROTHER—LABOR & CAPITAL

PERSONAL AND GENERAL

The city of Boston received one day recently three contributions to its conscience fund, amounting to $2200.

There have been 199,747 interments in Greenwood cemetery, at New York, all told, 5132 having been made in 1879.

The number of negroes who have left Louisiana for Kansas since the exodus movement was started is set down at 5000.

When Stephen Girard died in Philadelphia in 1832 the income of the estate which he left to the city was $63,000. It is now $877,165.

Two sons of the Prince of Wales are expected to be present in Quebec May 24 on the occasion of a grand military review of 5000 troops.

All the indications this year point to an almost unprecedented tide of emigration both from the old country and the eastern states towards the west.

The Cincinnati Commercial says, and is positive about it, that if Grant is nominated again Hamilton county will give 5000 majority against him, Montgomery 2000 and Butler 2500—enough to give the third term in Ohio a black eye of the most serious magnitude.

The ex-president is met in Texas by strong arguments against the third term. Says the Dallas Herald: "To yield to the temptation of a third term is to yield to every temptation that it will bring. There is no safety for the ex-president's patriotism; there is no safety for the country save in the rejection of every offer of the presidency."

LANDS,

PEND D'OREILLE DIVISION.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY

is now offering for sale nearly 3,000,000

[illegible] acres of land in the Pend d'Oreille Division [illegible] for forty miles on each side [illegible] located from the mouth of [illegible] Washington Territory to Lake Pend d'Oreille in Idaho. These lands of unexcelled fertility, suitable for farming on any scale that may be desired, are offered by the Railroad Company at such prices and terms as cannot fail to induce settlement and cultivation, causing a rapid growth in population of the country and increase [illegible] of those who now purchase.

The following Resolution of the Board of Directors of the Railroad Company, passed November [illegible], fixes the cash price of land to actual settlers at two dollars and sixty cents per acre, which it is believed is a lower price than has ever [illegible] placed upon its lands by any land grant company. This is in fact cheaper than [illegible] has the same class of land of [illegible] under the pre-emption law for [illegible] the making of final proof [illegible] land office which he must [illegible] to complete his entry is [illegible] per acre added to the government [illegible] by the Railroad Company.

Resolved, That the Agricultural Lands of the Company west of the Missouri river to Puget Sound shall be [illegible] for sale to actual settlers at Government price, $2 50 per acre, with an addition thereto of ten cents per acre to be paid to the Company to reimburse it for the cost of selecting, surveying and conveying said land.

[illegible] does not apply to coal or iron lands [illegible] chiefly valuable for timber nor to lands required for town sites or suitable for manufacturing [illegible] in regions where water is [illegible] containing springs or other natural supply where it shall be for the interest of settlers [illegible] that such water privileges shall not be exclusively held or controlled by any individual [illegible] the lands required for the use of the Company in connection with the operation of the road.

To persons wishing to purchase on time the regular price of four dollars per acre is given on the following terms: One fourth cash at time of purchase, the balance in four equal yearly payments at [illegible] per cent interest. The above price for time sales is adopted for the present, but may be subject to change in the future.

All persons who have filed with the Railroad Company notices of intention to purchase or Settlers' Applications as they are called for land in this Division (except for the class of lands reserved by the terms of the resolution above given) and who have continued to reside upon or cultivate the land applied for are requested to complete their purchase by making cash payment or time contract for the same. For this purpose application should be made to the Railroad Land Office at Colfax.

Persons who have not made actual settlement or improvement upon land they may have applied for have no right to the first privilege of purchase; such lands will be sold to the first applicant. Those persons who have in good faith settled upon and improved the Company's land should lose no time in securing the same, as after a given time the land is subject to sale to any other person.

The land in this division being now offered for sale no more Settlers' Applications will be filed.

GUY WESTBROOKE'S LOVE

Guy Westbr[illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] deep passion [illegible] and [illegible] tender [illegible]

The girl at his side with her [illegible] face and [illegible] smile was the very [illegible] his fastidious taste [illegible] Ethel [illegible] was only a se[illegible]stress for Miss Royal, the beautiful belle who had been trying for weeks, with some little success, to ensnare Guy's restless heart.

He had never seen Ethel's pure flower-like face until this morning, when, as fate would have it, just as he was turning the corner of the Royal mansion, she came out into the lawn in her simple morning dress [illegible] arrange a bouquet for Miss Royal [illegible] vases.

A [illegible] tender [illegible] heart [illegible] slender [illegible] his [illegible] her side [illegible] musical tones

"Your pardon, but did you not drop your scarf as you crossed the lawn?"

She reached out her hand to receive the dainty mantle which he extended to her, and in doing so their hands for an instant met.

She raised her eyes timidly to his face, and the earnest look of admiration which she encountered sent the warm blood pulsing to her cheeks.

"Thank you, it is mine. But I am sorry you troubled yourself about it. I was very careless to drop it."

The sound of her low, flute-like voice completed the charm which her face had wrought upon him.

"It was no trouble; a pleasure rather," and something in his grave, earnest tone, made her feel that the trite words were not spoken as idle flattery.

A moment more of lingering, tender scrutiny of the lovely flushed face drooping beneath his gaze, and he raised his hat with a courtly bow, sprang into his phaeton, and the impatient ponies whirled him from view.

Miss Royal, from the draped window of the elegant boudoir, had watched this little episode with frowning brows.

"A bold, designing girl! She dropped that blue scarf just as he drove up, to attract his attention. But I will see that he does not encounter her again. These common creatures are so artful, that one never knows what to expect; the only safe way is to let them know their place, and make them keep it."

And when sweet Ethel, with a delicate flush still lingering on her fair cheek, entered the room with her burden of beautiful flowers, Miss Royal said, with more than her usual hauteur:

"Hereafter, Ethel Nannette will attend to the vases. Your taste is very good in arranging them, but I cannot spare you so much from important duties. Now hurry and finish putting the trimming on the velvet dress. I want it at three, as I drive out with Mr. Westbrooke at that hour."

A grieved, disappointed expression crept over the girl's features.

Her one gleam of sunshine during the dreary day, was when she was out among the flowers, plucking the choicest and most fragrant, and afterward weaving them into marvels of grace and beauty to adorn the vases in the exquisitely appointed boudoir, where her feet were so rarely allowed to enter on any other errand.

And now this privilege was denied her. Her lip quivered, but she was too much accustomed to hide her feelings for the emotion to be visible for many moments on her mobile features.

And the summer waned without Guy Westbrooke's eyes ever again beholding the sweet face and graceful figure which so persistently haunted his imagination.

He was still a constant visitor at the Royal mansion, but the beautiful belle could not but know that her power over him was very slight.

One warm September evening as he was driving along the road leading from Royalton Park to the little village of Egremont, he perceived a figure, half-reclining, half sitting, by the roadside, whose graceful outline at once arrested his attention. One earnest glance sufficed to show him that it was the fair maiden of his dreams, and that she was in trouble. He was at her side in a moment, anxiously enquiring if he could aid her.

"You are very kind. I was so unfortunate as to sprain my ankle in crossing the style yonder, and now I cannot walk."

The sound of her fresh, sweet voice thrilled him through, and he dared not, for a moment, trust himself to speak. After a moment's hesitation, she continued:

"I cannot imagine what I am to do. I am fully two miles from home and am as powerless to reach there as an infant," and she glanced ruefully across the fields toward the village.

"But were you not on your way to Royalton Park?" hazarded Guy, in as even a voice as he could command, inwardly exulting over the mischance which gave him this meeting with the object of his dreams for so many months.

"Oh, no!" and Ethel sighed. "I was so unfortunate as to displease Miss Royal, and she has not required my services for some weeks. I am at home now, with my dear mother, in Egremont."

Guy's tone was wonderfully gay as he said:

"How fortunate that I came in my phaeton. Now I am going to lift you very carefully, and place you in the carriage. Then I shall drive you slowly, for fear of jarring the sprain, to your mother's house. I shall listen to no demurs," for he noticed a contraction of the lovely brows and a deprecating movement of one little hand. "Imagine me your good elder brother, or better, your physician, whom you are bound to obey, and we will be in Egremont before the little mother has time to grow uneasy over your prolonged absence."

And he bestowed such a smile upon her flushed, troubled countenance as Miss Royal would have given her wealth to evoke.

"By the way, you have not told me your mother's name."

"Mrs. Linwood." "And mine?" answering the question in his eyes, "is Ethel Linwood." "Your name," and she smiled mischievously, "is familiar to me, from having heard it spoken so often at Royalton Park."

Guy laughed merrily.

"Some day, Miss Linwood, I shall tell you all about those visits to Royalton Park. Now just trust yourself wholly to me, and do not exert yourself in the least, and I can place you in a carriage without causing you any pain, I hope."

After she was carefully ensconced on the seat by his side and everything arranged for her comfort, Guy, gazing at her earnestly, said:

"My father had an intimate friend at college named Edwin Linwood, of whom I have often heard him speak. Afterward Mr. Linwood became a clergyman."

"That was my father's name, and he was pastor of the Presbyterian church at Great Barrington when he died."

Ethel's voice trembled, for all the privation and suffering and humiliation which had come upon her dear gentle mother and herself since the loss of the dear one of whom she spoke rushed over her with painful distinctness.

Guy stretched out his hand impulsively, seized her rosy palm in a warm clasp, as he said:

"Then I claim for my father's sake the place of an old friend in your heart. Did you never hear your father speak of Hugh Westbrooke?"

O[illegible] w[illegible] great [illegible] dream [illegible] [illegible] How pleasant [illegible] like a story [illegible] [illegible] surprised and pleased [illegible]

The music of her words [illegible] enchanted Guy that he longed to seize the dainty hand again [illegible] the [illegible] we were [illegible] his heart. But he restrained himself and only flashed upon her one of his rare smiles, which made [illegible] bl[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to Ethel [illegible] We [illegible] [illegible] where the [illegible] he [illegible]

In [illegible] Mrs Linwood [illegible] her [illegible] He had learned [illegible] her gentle [illegible] [illegible] all her beauty and wealth could attract him again.

The next [illegible] as he was ascending the steps [illegible] of the hotels at Long Branch, a vision of dazzling beauty greeted his eyes.

He doffed his hat with his usual grace, and Miss Royal, with a languishing smile, extended her hand, saying:

"How glad I am to see you. What a stranger you are. I heard you were expected and have [illegible] on having you [illegible] party. We will have a charming set now that you are here."

He was murmuring some courteous reply when she flashed him a saucy glance from her lustrous eyes, saying, with a tinkling laugh:

"Madam Rumor has said some naughty things about you and a certain little maid in Egremont. But of course I don't believe a word. I know you too well to suppose that you would stoop—"

Here Guy interrupted her.

"Excuse me, Miss Royal; here is my wife."

He turned and threw his arm around Ethel's waist, who had descended the steps unperceived by her rival, and now stood by his side.

"I believe you have met before. I regret that we cannot join your charming party, but we only remain here until to-morrow. Good evening."

And with his lovely bride hanging on his arm Guy Westbrooke moved away.

Miss Royal bit her lips and murmured wrathfully:

"It was true after all. How artfully that girl played her cards. Well, that dream is over."

And it was. But Guy Westbrooke was happy with the woman of his choice.

Washington Irving's Loves.

[From the March Atlantic.

But before this humorous creation was completed the author endured the terrible bereavement which was to color his whole life. He had formed a deep and tender passion for Matilda Hoffman, the second daughter of Josiah Ogden Hoffman, in whose family he had long been on a footing of the most perfect intimacy, and his ardent love was fully reciprocated. Irving was restlessly casting about for some assured means of livelihood which would enable him to marry—perhaps his distrust of a literary career was connected with this desire—when, almost without warning, Miss Hoffman died in the eighteenth year of her age. Without being a dazzling beauty she was lovely in person and mind, with most engaging manners, a refined sensibility and a delicate and playful humor. The loss was a crushing blow to Irving, from the effects of which he never recovered, although time softened the bitterness of his grief into a tender and sacred memory. He could never bear any allusion to her even from his most intimate friends. After his death, in a private repository, of which he always kept the key, was found a lovely miniature, a braid of fair hair and a strip of paper on which was written in his own hand "Matilda Hoffman," and with these treasures were several pages of a memorandum in faded ink. He kept through life her Bible and her prayer book; they were placed nightly under his pillow in the first days of anguish that followed her loss, and ever after they were the inseparable companions of all his wanderings. This memorandum, it subsequently appeared, was a copy of a letter addressed to Mrs. Foster, a married lady, in which the story of his early love was related as a reason why he had never married. It was in 1823, while he sojourned in Dresden, that he became intimate with an English family residing there, named Foster, and conceived for the daughter, Miss Emily Foster, a deep attachment. That this would have resulted in marriage if the lady's affection had not been preoccupied the Fosters believed. Irving's biographer thinks otherwise, and gives reasons for believing that he could not at that time have entertained a project of matrimony. It is not for us to question his judgment, with his full knowledge of the circumstances; yet it is evident that Irving was very seriously impressed and very much unsettled until he drove away the impression by hard work with his pen; and it would be nothing new in human nature and experience if he had for the time yielded to the attractions of loveliness and a most congenial companionship and had returned again to an exclusive devotion to the image of the early loved and lost.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

ANOTHER DECLARATION BY ARCHBISHOP WOOD OF PHILADELPHIA AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

[Philadelphia Special to Chicago Times.]

Archbishop Wood has written another circular condemning secret societies, which will be sent to the churches. It was called out by the announcement that the Ancient Order of Hibernians will hold a convention in this city in June. The archbishop says: "The Catholic church has again and again condemned and censured all secret societies properly so called as dangerous to civil society and injurious to the interests of religion." He says that "most insidious efforts have been and are being made in many parts of our diocese, and probably throughout the whole country, to blind and deceive the faithful and entangle them in the meshes and shackles of these unlawful and forbidden societies," and the archbishop warns against an alliance with such societies. He continues: "To say nothing of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Sons of Temperance, etc., about whose condemnation no doubt can exist, these societies are known by various other appellations, such, for example, as the Nation at Brotherhood, condemned by the bishops of Ireland; the Fenian Brotherhood, whose efforts to aggregate them here to their association are unscrupulous and unceasing; and, in addition to these, the Mollie Maguires, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Buckshots and others whose spirit is equally objectionable, and whose names seem to be selected rather to conceal than to indicate the object of their association."

Brother Gardner Refuses an Oil Painting

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

"I hez accidentally larned," began Brother Gardner as the meeting opened, "dat de local members of our club am makin' up a shake purse to buy me an ile paintin' as a present. I hope the scheme will stop short. Not dat I wouldn't feel grateful—not dat I wouldn't 'preciate de kind motives of de givers, but kase it would be money frown away. I lib in a humble cabin. We hev got some stuff d green [illegible] in de parlor an' some char [illegible] on de wall dat cost two shillin's apiece, but it am no place far an ile paintin'. If white men walk aroun' like lords an' yet owe fur last winter's coal, it's no guide fur me. APRIL MAGAZINES

[illegible] for April (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York) [illegible] a large variety. Mr [illegible] with Small Fruit [illegible] Mr [illegible] contains the [illegible] of which the reader has [illegible] Mr [illegible] [illegible] third installment with [illegible] Crowth of [illegible] ing by Mr Theodore [illegible] of [illegible] deals with Early Methods on the [illegible] to be followed by a second paper on the Modern Method by Machines. The Orchestra of To-day, by Mr. Sidney [illegible] is descriptive of the differences of construction of the best known musical instruments. [illegible] Miles in Italian Caverns is an account of [illegible] Mountain Miles by Mr [illegible] illustrated paper of fun and adventure. An interesting anecdotal biography of Jules Michelet, the historian, is contributed by Mr. J. D. Osborne. The poetry of the number includes a narrative poem [illegible] Marriage, by H. H. The [illegible] by Charles de Kay, and poems by Dora Read Goodale and Violet Hunt.

St. Nicholas for April (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York,) is crowded full of good things for the little folks. An Adventure in an Egg, Nar, The Bell Buoy, a Dead City, and the Dear Little Deer are entertaining and instructive sketches. The serial, Jack and Jill, grows in interest. What Happened to Japan, The Major's Big Talk stories, How Bo Peep's Sheep were Found, Keely's Motor, the Young Egyptian and Napoleon, the Game of Kite Cutting and Among the Lakes are bright short stories and sketches. A Burial at Sea is a pathetic relation of a common tragedy, and St. George and the Dragon is a spirited ballad. There are a number of graceful poems, and the number is profusely and charmingly illustrated as usual.

The numbers of The Living Age (Littell & Company, Boston,) for the weeks ending March 20th and 27th respectively contain the following articles: Bishop Wilberforce and The Romance of Modern Travel, Quarterly; British [illegible] Edinburgh; The Halcyon's Nest, Macmillan; A Wild Irish Girl, Temple Bar; The History of Writing, Something About Milk and Artificial Production of Diamonds, Nature; Street Discords, Saturday Review; Quarrels in a Library, and Mr. Bright as a Churchman, Spectator, with installments of "He that will not when he may," by Mrs. Oliphant, and Adam and Eve, by the author of Dorothy Fox.

The first installment of Mr. Aldrich's new story, "The Stillwater Tragedy," opens the April Atlantic and two most interesting chapters of Howell's "Undiscovered Country" add attractions to the number. The hero and heroine of this latter romance, the medium and her father, are at the Shakers, and a charming picture of this peculiar people is given. The truth, charity, purity of life and lovable quaintness of the Shakers are finely portrayed, and the description of the country in the summer time is very fine. The conversation between Dr. Boynton and the Shakers with whom his daughter's long illness compels him to stay is instructive as well as interesting. The story increases in power with each installment and it bids fair to be one of the most popular novels of the year. There are several papers of more than ordinary interest, among others the third installment of "Reminiscences of Washington," which deals with the Jackson administration; Coleridge as Poet and Man, by J. P. Lathrop, and "A Canterbury Pilgrimage," by Richard Grant White. Mr. Whittier has a fine poem, "The Lost Occasion," and Rose Terry Cooke has a short story. The contributors' club has more than its ordinary attractions this month.

WEDLOCK

IS IT WELL TO MARRY

[From the New York Telegram.]

Thousands of couples in the city are engaged in a hopeless and life-long struggle against poverty because they romantically believe that, seasoned with the sauce of connubial felicity, half of a loaf of bread would go as far as a whole loaf. A man alone in the world can manage to tumble or crawl over rough places somehow, but as a husband and father the rough places tax his patience and fortitude to the degree that he sometimes falls by the way, leaving wife and children to the cold charity of the world. In these matters no rule can be laid down. Individuals should be judges unto themselves. They who feel that they cannot afford marriage should wait until they can. The increasing frequency of divorces indicates clearly enough that there is too much marrying in haste. In Massachusetts 7233 divorces were granted during 19 years from 1860 to 1879. An officer of the Suffolk county court in Massachusetts says that the business which his office has lost by bankrupt laws has been largely made up by the fees in divorce cases. We need not assume that the wedded couples of Massachusetts are less happy, as a rule, than those of any other state; but when we consider the surplus of unmarried women in the state compared with the unmarried men, it must occur to every thoughtful person that the so-called hopeless spinsters are better off as they are than in the wedded state. If the proceedings in the divorce courts indicate anything, the phrase "single blessedness" means a good deal with these hopeless spinsters.

English Prices for American Goods.

[From the Philadelphia Press.]

One of the commercial puzzles yet to be explained is the reason why you can buy excellent "Blue Point" oysters in London for a shilling a dozen; why the Atlantic and Scribner's monthlies can be bought there for the same price; how it is that American butter, cheese and beef are now to be found in nearly every village of Scotland and England, while the greater part of the sea coast population of Wales live on American canned goods, all of which can be bought for far less there than here—a good cut of American beef, for instance, costs two pence halfpenny, or five cents a pound. Developing our foreign commerce is a good thing, but is there any reason why we should not be able to get things produced here for at least the same price that our British cousins can? If the Atlantic and Scribner's are to be bought in London for a shilling, why should we pay more than a quarter of a dollar for them? or what is a more vital question, with American beef at five and six cents a pound at retail, why is it that the lowest price in the wholesale market here is [illegible] cents a pound, and that without the added expense of transportation and other incidentals? An explanation is in order from the producers.

Shall the People or Political Desperadoes Elect the President?

[New York Herald, Ind.

Does the country want another presidential election like that of 1876? Does it want another period of months of turmoil and excitement, prostrating business, checking industry, increasing employment, increasing poverty and idleness, demoralizing the people and making the nation less capable of self government? If all this is desirable there is an easy way to get it. The republicans have only to nominate the ex-president and the democrats Mr. S. J. Tilden. Let the voters of each party resign their proper functions into the hands of the party machines and they can make sure of as uneasy and as demoralizing a time as the worst band of tramps in the country could desire. The ex-president and Tilden would mean despair on one side and mean desperation on the other. It would mean to the American people meeting, at the polls good naturedly to decide who should be their head clerk for the next four years, it would mean the desperate combat of two sets of political gamblers for the spoils of [illegible] to the disgust, injury and demoralization of the voters.

Anti Third-Term Germans Determined to Defeat the Ex-President

[New York Herald, March 20.]

The Germans of the [illegible]th congressional district have organized a club to forward the interests of John Sherman for the presidency. They are [illegible] opposed to the third term and [illegible] the ex-president [illegible] Chicago to refuse [illegible] vote for any candidate unless the democratic convention should give them an independent man worthy of their support. If the ex-president should be [illegible] that he will be defeated, and in such an event they intend to do the [illegible] republican congressmen so as to check the reins of a democratic executive. The second meeting of the club, which was held last night at No. [illegible] Ninth street, was presided over by John W. Brenmer and the members present were addressed by Mr. J. [illegible], editor of the New York [illegible]. The speaker contended that as the war was over there was no reason [illegible] As the [illegible] of Mr. Byland's remarks, the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] weeks. The meeting then adjourned until Thursday evening, March 25.

BRITISH POLITICS

Classification of Constituencies, Population, Voters and Franchise

The elections in the United Kingdom now in progress [illegible] the following statement of constituencies of the [illegible] [illegible] The electoral body of the United Kingdom is divided into [illegible] classes, voters in counties, in boroughs and in universities. There are also [illegible] subdivisions within the classes. The residents of Scotch and English boroughs enjoy household suffrage without restriction of value, but in Irish boroughs the suffrage is limited by a rating value of £4 or $20 per annum. The English counties possess a life lease franchise which exacts a clear rating of not less than £5 or $[illegible] per annum and an occupation franchise of £[illegible] or $[illegible] per annum. In the Scotch counties the suffrage is conferred by an ownership franchise of £[illegible] or $25 a year. There are also [illegible] diverse qualifications which bring freeholders, lodgers and other classes of residents within the registry. It will be seen that the constituencies of the United Kingdom are very far from forming a homogeneous body of electors.

The classification of the constituencies of England and Wales is shown in the following tables, which gives, according to the latest returns, the population, the number of registered electors and the number of representatives in each class.

CONSTITUENCIES OF ENGLAND AND WALES.

	Population	Registered electors	Members
52 counties	[illegible] 112 0[illegible]0	853 619	18[illegible]
200 boroughs and cities	10 [illegible] [illegible]63	1 [illegible]4 319	[illegible]
8 universities		13 [illegible]	5
255 divisions	[illegible] 761 119	2 4[illegible]3 309	48[illegible]

In the parliament prorogued recently the representatives of these constituencies were divided by the party line as under:

	Conservatives	Liberals	Irish Home Rulers
52 counties	1[illegible]	3[illegible]	0
200 boroughs and cities	13[illegible]	160	0
8 universities	4	1	0
255 divisions	2[illegible]4	196	0

It will be seen that the counties of the home kingdom are the stronghold of the present ministry. Among the county members the conservatives outnumber the liberals by 117, while in the boroughs the latter show a small majority of 23. In all the constituencies of England and Wales counted together the conservatives lead their opponents by 97. We turn now to Scotland.

CONSTITUENCIES OF SCOTLAND.

	Population	Registered electors	Members
33 counties	1 886 984	92 310	32
22 cities and burgh districts	1 479 591	204 14[illegible]	26
4 universities		11 489	2
59 divisions	3 366 3[illegible]5	307 941	60

The party line runs as follows in the Scotch constituencies:

	Conservatives	Liberals	Irish Home Rulers
33 counties	15	1	0
22 cities etc.	2	24	0
4 universities	1	1	0
59 divisions	18	4[illegible]	0

In Ireland the classification is as below:

CONSTITUENCIES OF IRELAND.

	Population	Number of registered electors	Members
32 counties	4 5[illegible]0 852	172 070	64
33 cities and boroughs	866 3[illegible]6	55 247	37
1 university		2 172	2
66 divisions	[illegible]5 386 [illegible]08	231 289	103

The Irish constituencies are split into three parties—conservatives, liberals and home rulers.

	Conservatives	Liberals	Irish Home Rulers
32 counties	20		39
33 cities and boroughs	11	6	16
1 university	2		0
66 divisions	33	13	5

As a final classification, we present the distribution of the constituencies in the United Kingdom.
